DEWEY LOOKS TO PEACE ERA

G.O.P. Candidate Claims New Deal Fails To Plan Post-War Reconversion.

By The Associated Press
PITTSBURGH, July 31—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, asserting that the New Deal had failed to plan for postwar reconversion, declared today that it may not be long before the most vital thing that faces every American is his opportunity to work.
Arriving here for conferences with political, business and labor leaders, the Republican presidential nominee told a press conference the country should remember that in November it will be electing a president, "most of whose term will be in peace time."
"As I see it," Dewey said, "the United States simply cannot face another period like the Roosevelt depression which lasted for eight years, with more than 10,000,000 men unemployed continuously from 1933 through 1940."
Dewey, who was greeted by a large crowd at the railroad station and spectators lining the streets on a circuitous parade to a downtown hotel, said he had come to Pennsylvania to begin work on "the too long delayed preparations for reconversion of industry" which he said vitally involved employment after the war ends.
"I think proper government policies can contribute enormously, and I believe successfully, in avoiding unemployment which so many now regard as inevitable under an administration that failed for eight years to meet the program despite tremendous deficits," Dewey said he planned to talk with political leaders about the campaign while here, as well as to discuss the postwar reconversion problem.
Observing that Pittsburgh produces one-fourth of the nation's steel and Pennsylvania one-fourth of its coal, the New York governor said he wanted to talk first with people close to the problem of continuing our employment levels after the war ends.
Although Dewey has scheduled conferences later in the day with local representatives of the United Mine Workers of America, he said he had no plans to see President John F. Lewis of that organization.

Action on Hospital Pay Raise Blocked by New Difficulties

Council Finds Program as Proposed Would Cost Over $30,000 Annually; To Seek "Workable Plan."

City council struck a snag when it met in special session Saturday night to act on the recommendation of its hospital committee for salary increases at the City hospital to avert a threatened walkout of nurses.
The snag developed between the time the hospital committee and a group of nurses met last Monday night and figured the increase would cost approximately $1,000 a month and the time that the actual legislation was presented to council Saturday night. In drafting the pay increase legislation and figuring out just how it would affect the hospital payroll, Mayor H. L. Dowler and City Auditor Elmer Shaw discovered the pay raise would cost between $30,000 and $40,000 a year, rather than $1,000 a month.
Last Monday night the committee arrived at the $1,000 figure by applying the increases to the present number of hospital employees. But in drafting the legislation, which Mayor Dowler told councilmen was done "with considerable difficulty," the recommendations of Mrs. Margaret Bradbury, superintendent of the hospital, were followed. A number of additional employees put on the staff, were followed with the result that the payroll increase jumped to between $30,000 and $40,000 a year.

BURGLARY RING SUSPECTS HELD

Series of Breakins Over Period of Six Weeks Believed Cleared by 8 Arrests.

A series of eight arrests made over the week-end promises to clear a number of burglaries in Marion over the last six weeks, city police reported today.
At noon today charges had not yet been filed against any of the suspects.
Two juveniles accused of figuring in the break-ins were turned over to juvenile authorities. One of those is still being held for investigation, three were released and two are being held at city prison pending filing of charges.
Six Burglaries Listed
Thefts cleared by the arrests, police said, include six from Marion stores and offices. The first occurred on June 13 when the Master Feed store on Quarry street was entered and $10 in cash taken. The money was not recovered, but a pencil stolen from the office identified one of the suspects.
The Marion Milling Co. on North Prospect street was broken into July 17 and scale weights and a large cake or bread knife taken. The knife was recovered later.
Two thefts were made July 19 when the Myers Cleaners on North Main street and the refreshments stand at Garfield park were entered. Cash amounting to $40 and an electric razor were taken from the cleaning establishment. The money was not recovered, but police located the razor. A case of Coca Cola taken from the refreshment stand was later discovered hidden near Crystal lake.

CUTBACK IN SUB BUILDING ORDERED

WASHINGTON, July 31—The navy announced a cutback in the submarine building program today and attributed the step to two factors—the loss of fewer submarines than was expected and the need for at least eight other types of ships or weapons.

Pet Cat Keeps Lonely Vigil at Ohio Mine Entrance Where Owner Went To Death

By The Associated Press
Bellaire, O., July 31—The lonely cat of Cat Run—saved from starvation as it kept a hopeless vigil beside the shaft where 86 miners are entombed—still waited faithfully today for the master who never will return.
Tom, a proud alley cat, has viciously fought off efforts to remove him from the sealed mouth of the pit through which his owner, Odell Brown, and the others walked to their death at nearby Powhatan mine July 5.
The animal followed its owner to the Cat Run entrance of the pit the day the miners were trapped by flames deep in the shaft.
Rescue workers seeking desperately to reach the imprisoned men first heard the cat's plaintive cry.
One of the miners recognized the cat and notified Mrs. Brown, who came to the shaft with her two children and tried to coax Tom to return home.
Failing in this, one of the youngsters picked Tom up and was clamped on the shoulder.

NEW WEAPON HELPS U. S. WIN IN MARIANAS

Guam's Harbor and Airstrip and Tinian Town Now in American Hands.

By The Associated Press
U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR, July 31—A secret weapon gave American forces a new advantage in the invasion of the Marianas today as the spearheads hastened a widening wedge across Guam and swept past Tinian's largest town.
"One of the most fearful instruments of death from America's arsenal of secret weapons" aided the Tinian invaders, War Correspondent Clinton Green reported as Gen. Chester W. Nimitz announced Guam's main harbor and airstrip already were in American hands.
Security prohibits even a hint as to the nature of the weapon, Green said, but its effectiveness has been proved.
"It is truly fearful and it is extremely doubtful whether any human being would be able to survive," he wrote "it is easy to foresee the devastation and death which would result from its use on such targets as the crowded cities of the Japanese homeland."

NAZIS STIFFEN STAND IN ITALY

Counterattack at Every Opportunity in Desperate Defense of Florence.

By The Associated Press
ROME, July 31—Counterattacks at every opportunity, Nazi infantry and tanks held the Eleventh army at bay in the hills 5 to 7 miles southwest of Florence today as a cost heavily likely to prove worthwhile in the enemy's depleted ranks, allied headquarters said.
Artillery laid down thundering curtains of fire on German units which backed out in a short time, the allied spearheads knocked back from Florence's last defense.
Along the Fifth army's 30-mile front on the lower Arno river, vigorous attacks on both sides continued to trade fire across the stream. There were no indications the Americans had penetrated beyond the southern limit of Pisa.
Planes from the Kenney and Nimitz forces joined in attacks upon Tru's, Wolke's, Nemo's and Ponape in the Carolines, Nauru Island and by-passed enemy bases in the Marshalls.
Nimitz announced that 958 soldiers and Marines have been killed on Guam through Saturday and 4,739 wounded. Two hundred and ninety are missing Japanese casualties, 4,543 counted dead and 44 prisoners.
American casualties during the Saipan campaign were 3,049 dead, 365 missing and 13,049 wounded. Japanese killed numbered 21,075. American casualties on Tinian from the invasion date, July 23, through July 25: 159 killed, 32 missing, 441 wounded. Japanese dead: 2,089.
MacArthur reported an additional 1,385 Japanese have been killed in the Aitape-Wewak battle sector of British New Guinea, bringing enemy fatalities since the start of the Aitape attacks July 11 to 2,859.

YANKS DRIVE ON IN NORMANDY

The places the Yank doughboys in position to drive on into central France. Entry into this important city, key to Brittany's state don't, came after what was said to be probably the greatest single day's gains since the invasion of France June 6. Avranches is shown at the right center in the map above.

SPEEDY DASH TAKES TROOPS TO AVRANCHES

Americans Now in Position for Drive on Paris or To Attack Brest Peninsula.

BULLETIN
By The Associated Press
SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 31—Fairly strong American forces advanced "well into" Avranches today, the coastal city at the base of the Cotentin peninsula near Brittany.
SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 31—A high-speed American armored column, bursting through the German's scrambled Seventh army, had raced into Avranches in a dash of 18 miles from last reported positions and establishing today a pivotal line threatening the flank of the entire German defense in western France.
Avranches is 60 miles across the Normandy peninsula from the 14-day beachheads, and a firm grip on the town would permit the Americans' powerful tank columns to swing around the Germans and toward Paris, 100 miles to the east, or chop off the Brest peninsula in an offensive toward the south. Avranches is at the right angle formed by the Brest and Normandy peninsulas.
The Allies had thrown a 105-mile arc across the base of the Normandy peninsula ready for a break into central France, a situation which a qualified observer declared had "immense possibilities."
The lion ring thrown to Avranches shut another trap on Germans fighting around Granville and on a line from Gavray through Percy to Tressy-Sur-Vire to the north. Already 10,000 prisoners had been taken since the start of the American offensive last Tuesday, and the remnants of at least eight Nazi divisions were being ground up rapidly by the American tank machine.
The Germans faced a further great threat in a new offensive by Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British and Canadians who launched an offensive on a seven-mile front from Caumont Sunday at dawn and smashed forward to a depth of eight miles in the enemy's rear.
This drive had taken the village of Gueut, at the peak of the spearhead, and rolled over a dozen other towns and hamlets.
Three Miles from Granville
Another American spearhead, advancing south from Coutances, had penetrated within three miles of the coastal city of Granville, but this area was believed pretty well neutralized by the deeper push to Avranches, 15 miles southward.
Just to the east, the Germans were putting up appreciable armored resistance on a line running roughly from Gavray through Percy to Tressy-Sur-Vire. But this would do them no good without Avranches as an anchor on the seacoast, because the Americans can move around behind them.
At least 600 tanks were disclosed officially to be participating in the American drive.
The advance to Avranches cut the highway to Paris, 180 miles east.
On the American Eastern flank, the First army crossed the Torgny-Sur-Vire-Caumont road, a mile north and three miles east of Torgny.
Avranches is in the right-angle corner formed by the junction of the bases of the Cotentin and Brest peninsulas. If the Americans break through there, they could push straight ahead, cutting off the Brest peninsula, or southward.

Marion Woman Gets Card from Husband, German Prisoner

A card received from her husband, Lt. Robert Willis, now a prisoner of the Germans, this week, notified Mrs. June Willis of 689 Concord avenue that he suffered a broken leg when his plane came down in Germany while on a mission over that territory on March 23.

The card, which was the first word Mrs. Willis had received direct from her husband, also brought the first news of his injury. He wrote that he had been in the hospital since March 23, but was getting along fine and hoped to be moved to a regular camp soon. The card, written May 9, was first sent to the war department and then forwarded to Mrs. Willis. Since that time the war department forwarded Mrs. Willis her husband's address at a prison camp.

Approximately 18 cards received by Mrs. Willis from American Legion "listening posts" and private individuals from various parts of the country recently informed her that the name of her husband, pilot of a bombing plane, was one of five Americans mentioned as German prisoners of war, in a broadcast from Germany late the night of July 18. The five, Mrs. Willis believes, are the members of Lt. Willis' crew. Lt. Willis entered service two years ago last January and has been overseas since January of this year.

The letter states: "I sure feel swell over everything you do for me, and most of all that people back home are backing up 'dog faces' with everything they have."

National Unity: The Real Thing

GOV. DEWEY'S repudiation of the candidacy of Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York, on the grounds that anyone who "injects a political campaign into a political campaign" is guilty of a crime, is a political campaign in itself. The only way to achieve in New York state and which he has pledged himself to work for if elected president is the real thing, not the bogus version which has been peddled in Washington the last few years. The bogus version called for a kind of watered-down totalitarianism in which the party in power would get rid of its political opposition by taking them into camp and gagging them with the American flag.

Gov. Dewey's version is concerned with unity of the people. "For years we have had men in Washington who were notoriously weak in certain branches of arithmetic—but who specialized in division," he said at Chicago. "They have played up minor differences of opinion until the people of other countries could have thought that America was cleft in two."

It takes political courage for a presidential candidate to repudiate the congressional candidacy of a member of his own party. It may not be good politics. Rep. Fish may be able to hurt Gov. Dewey. But in this country, among citizens who have grown tired of politicians jumping at every chance to buy votes with prejudice—tired and a little scared—there is coming to be a feeling that the presidency, the grand prize of politics, may not be worth winning one of these days unless its seekers pay more attention to national unity and less to the disunity which has been the chief stock in trade the last decade.

Triumph of Horse Sense

THE great inconsistency of the New Deal in its heyday was its systematic persecution of the sources of employment when unemployment was the country's main problem. Instead of recognizing that the fate of its reforms was contingent on the restoration of the high national income it professed to be seeking, the New Deal jeopardized its aims by many measures tending to repress the only force, except war, which can produce national income. It demanded the fruits of a high rate of national enterprise while denying enterprise the confidence it needed to become more active.

There has been in this respect a modified triumph of horse sense. Almost unnoticed in the excitement of the war emergency, but stimulated by proof that the emergency was being surmounted by the resourcefulness of private enterprise when given reasonable latitude and a chance to be of service, there has emerged one of Gov. Dewey's "areas of agreement." Both political parties and all other organizations in the nation with a voice now advocate effectual measures to help private enterprise furnish maximum employment after the war. Both parties advocate tax reform to help accomplish this. For the first time in a political generation, the source of the nation's well-being—enterprise—is being promised a green light by both political parties.

More Handsome Housing

MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT who travels more than most of us these days, is latest to observe something that should get earnest attention in what is expected to be a boom in home construction after the war. "There are many houses in which people live that you would like to see replaced by better ones," she declares in the course of saying that much of this country has an unfinished, raw look about it.

Unfortunately, it is going to take more than mere construction to make the houses of this country as good as the people deserve. It is going to take designing, to keep construction from being wasted on buildings that will look shabby, or incongruous, within a generation. Some of the oldest dwellings in the nation, notably those in New England villages, are still the most attractive and the most comfortable. Housing is infinitely more than the erection of dwelling places. Good housing implies construction of a permanent character, so designed that it will remain architecturally and functionally useful for generations. When some of the atrocities which have been foisted on the public in the name of "better housing" are studied, one is inclined to suspect that housing may have been set back 50 years by the "better housing" movement.

While we can talk today in terms of formidably bad luck, there is absolutely no necessity to prophesy a continuation along the same lines provided that German leadership capitulates on its experience and does not repeat its previous mistakes.—Lt. Gen. Kurt Dietmar, Nazi radio commentator.

News Behind the News

Bretton Woods Agreements Seen as Means of Perpetuating "One-Way" Trade.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 31—The money and bank plans laid out by the Bretton Woods conference are expected to be a long and hard sell.

The experts who do, are expected to be using even involved language and words that they cannot put on a simple understanding to the average man.

The announcements stand in the pages as a wall of words like a few billion pounds of steel wool. No one can take it apart and say what each strand means—or even what use will be made of the whole. But surveying the wall, this much of it is apparent to objective experts:

These contrivances are only the last step in an American theory which began in the last war. Then we had the war loan and debt. Next in peace we had the export-import bank which worked out a loan-lease and now loan-lease has worked into this post-war proposal.

The basic theory of all is the same: It is up to us as a nation of great wealth to supply the insatiable demands of the world for goods. These supplies must be given on credit, the easiest credit which probably will not be repaid in the future as they have never been generally repaid in the past.

(The South American governments today are literally rich from the war, yet they have not repaid the loans made to Americans, and if you will note the quotations on these on the New York exchanges, our expectations are not high.)

As a matter of fact, a leading commentator has written that we really should not expect repayment from these future obligations and he actually contended that the information—we would receive from this new financial arrangement would be worth the few billions we are putting into the proposition. That is an excited exaggeration.

"Development" Loans But the position of the administration itself is that this arrangement is cheap at any price in view of what the world is facing, although these loans are not alone to be for war rehabilitation, you must understand, but for "development" of all nations.

Now this line of thought, this notion we have been following since 1915 has been popular in this country. Most people seem to like the idea, and support it. Indeed it is my guess that the next congress, if it is anything like this one, will surely accept the monetary scheme and possibly even the bank.

The new idea is popular because people think we profit by selling our goods abroad, that these exports will be largely spent in this country, furnishing stimulation to labor and business. All export businesses are thoroughly for it.

But actually it takes substance out of the country in the ultimate end, because it is apparent the foreign governments actually cannot repay us for what they get.

One-Way Business

We call it, kind of thing the promotion of "foreign trade." Actually it is promoting only one way trade, exporting. The only way we could be repaid is for us to receive an equal amount of goods from the foreign countries, through a system in operation. But we ourselves prevent this by another policy which also is popular among us. Our people do not want foreign goods coming here in competition with our own. The money manufacturers for instance want to sell American goods around the world, but they do not want British goods coming in here. He is no different from the farmer who does not want Argentine wool coming in, but wants to sell annual surpluses in the world market.

I am not now quarreling with any of these theories. I am merely presenting the fundamentals behind the Bretton Woods agreements, the factors which inspired them, so that you may better understand them. I will present a detailed analysis of them tomorrow.

Incongruous

But fundamentally they perpetuate an incongruity, a conflicting way in which we are involved—on the one hand to give money-credit we hardly expect to be repaid, and on the other hand to hinder repayment by restricting importations of goods and therefore actually have a one-way trade policy.

The foreign nations will know this, if our inept citizens do not, and they use it to the fullest. We can lessen these consequences to whatever extent we import non-competitive foreign goods, and might be better off with a direct foreign buying policy which would accumulate stock piles of materials in which we are deficient, against future emergencies.

Picking Splinters in Platform

By Jack Stinnett

WASHINGTON — It would be interesting to know how many voters actually read the platforms of the party they subscribe to. Even professional politicians admit it probably is a minute percentage of the electorate.

The Republican platform this year runs to around 4,500 words, the Democratic to around 1,300. This brevity on the part of the "ins" is not new. The "ins" point with pride and mainly stand on their record. The "outs" view with alarm. It takes more words to view with alarm than point with pride.

But don't think platforms are unimportant. The first major party platform was written 104 years ago. The Democrats had re-nominated Martin Van Buren and adopted nine "articles," seven of which berated the opposition. The other two were positive statements of policy. The eighth article was one which practically every platform of both parties has continued ever since. It was a declaration that if elected, the party representatives would do everything in their power to reduce the cost of government.

One Exception Only once in the last century has a party tried to ditch the platform. In 1888, Grover Cleveland, then president, had himself re-nominated and let it be known that no matter what the Republicans said or when they nominated he would stand on his record. Cleveland was defeated. That political technique has never been tried again.

Few historians have delved into the story of party platforms. David Hunsbaw, New York publicist, has made it something of a hobby. He admits that it sometimes is like "wandering through a graveyard of dead issues," but he finds much fascinating in the trip too.

His conclusion is that if both parties would be absolutely honest, they would adopt the platform of shaggy old Mike Sutton, early day Dodge City, Kansas, lawyer who ran for mayor on the platform: "Like Caesar's wife, I will be all things to all men."

Nevertheless, out of the mass of contradictions, "weasel words," pussyfooting and windiness, there do come declarations showing how the parties stand on important issues.

Changed Viewpoint

The contradictions, according to Hunsbaw, come from experience of the day. For example, the Democrats on numerous occasions have had a plank opposing child and even second terms. You won't find any such plank in the Democratic platform today, but you will find Republicans working to make such a plank an amendment to our Constitution.

Pussyfooting and windiness come from attempting to write a platform that will allow for all exigencies that may arise and won't antagonize active minority groups.

But if you can wade through all this and weigh it for what it is worth you'll find somewhere in almost every platform what your party stands for. No voter can vote intelligently without knowing that.

Cold Calculations

By The Associated Press
CITING high military and political authorities in Washington as convinced that the war with Germany can be won in 1944, John Gunther, in an article in the August Reader's Digest, warns that failure to do so may well bring direct consequences to Europe.

Says Mr. Gunther: "It is vitally important that we beat Germany to her knees quickly. Quick victory in Europe will save precious American lives. Another urgent reason is that it may prevent Europe itself from dying. Should western Europe be swayed of its remaining strength and vitality, Germany—even though defeated—will remain the strong power on the continent (Russia excluded). Germany will thus have won a major objective."

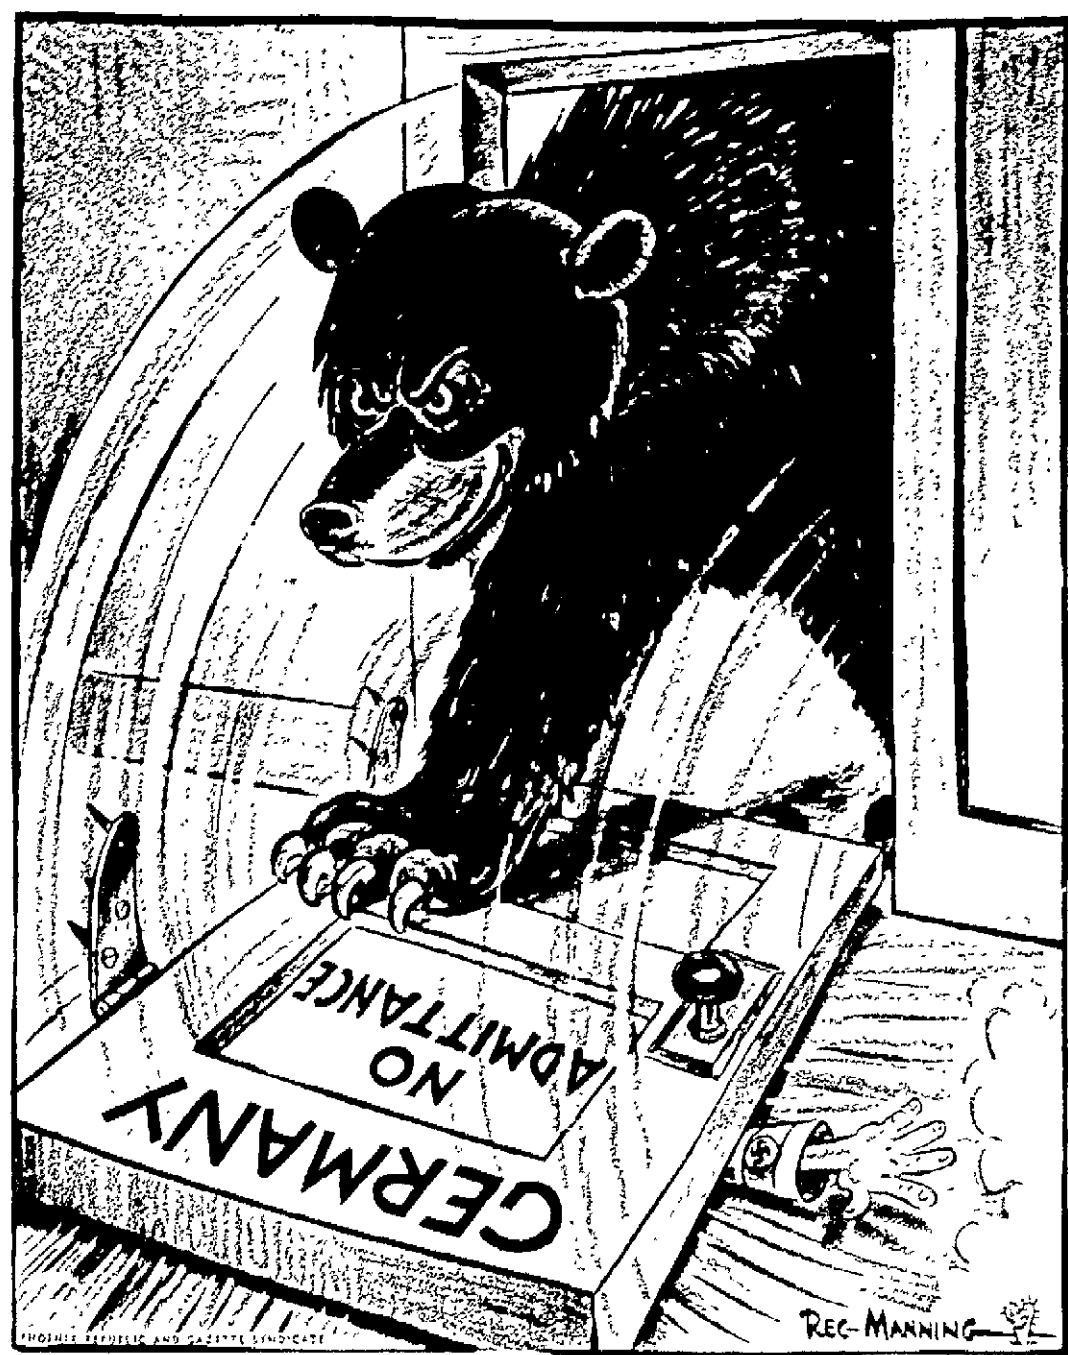

The Germans think of every war, including this one as a kind of battle or campaign in a "permanent war," he writes, quoting the German governor of Paris as saying: "What does a provisional defeat matter to us if we have been able to destroy so much manpower and material in neighboring territories that we have obtained an economic and numerical superiority greater than before 1939? With the war booty which we have accumulated, the enfeebling of two generations of the manpower of our neighbors and the destruction of their industry, we shall be better placed to conquer 25 years from now than we were in 1939."

In line with his policy, the Germans have deliberately sought to starve the rest of Europe after sucking out all available healthy manpower, says Gunther, continuing:

"The number of citizens of occupied countries doing forced labor inside Germany is now estimated at between eight and eleven million. Many more millions of the people left in the occupied countries have been enfeebled by lack of food; innumerable children—whom Germany looks upon as future enemies—have been rendered physically

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO.

It was Tuesday, July 31, 1934. Two Nazis convicted of taking part in the putsch in which Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss of Austria was slain were hanged. They were Otto Planetta, former army staff sergeant, and Otto Holzweber, leader of the putsch. Planetta was reported to have admitted firing the shots that killed Dollfuss.

Plans for use of the Marion Packing Co. plant for slaughter of government cattle were abandoned, according to word received by John Abel, county relief director, from state relief officials.

Premier Keisuke Okada of Japan, meeting foreign correspondents in Tokyo, said Japan in the 1935 naval conference hoped to obtain a more favorable naval ratio with the United States and England than the 5-5-3 ratio of 1922, but didn't expect to reduce naval power to a parity with Japan. He added, in answer to one question, that "I believe America and Japan are bound to live in the most intimate friendship. There are no difficult questions between the two countries."

County Recorder Stephen J. Hart issued his annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924. It showed that chattel mortgages for the year totaled $6,733 as against $5,400 for the preceding year.

An open meeting for all Marion county ex-servicemen was held at the headquarters of Bradley McGinnis post of the American Legion to arrange for filing of requested compensation claims.

Mrs. Harry Baker, in charge of the claim department at the Legion club room, estimated that there were about 2,200 veterans and dependents of veterans in Marion county eligible for compensation.

How To Treat Service NP's

By H. W. Blakeslee

Associated Press Science Editor.

NEW YORK—Nearly a quarter of a million young men have been discharged from American military forces as psychoneurotics. Before the war is over another quarter-million are likely to be released for the same cause, but with the vital difference that they will not be called psychoneurotics.

The two classes add up to half a million men whose families are asking—how do we receive them, how do we treat them, what can we do for them?

There is one, and just one, big fact for families and friends to remember: these boys are no different than when they left home.

Basically the Same They will have different habits, different experience, different fears, but basically they are the same.

They were in short, psychoneurotics before they left, provided they were correctly labeled when discharged from military service.

Without war they would largely have gone through life without serious troubles, regarded as normal by family and friends.

Psychiatrists have summed up what to do. The summing-up emphasizes the little, kindly, tolerant considerations which mostly would have been done without a thought had not the war label, N.P., raised a great fear.

The psychiatric and psychological summing-up also emphasizes the danger that overdoing the welcome home may aggravate the very thing it is designed to avoid.

Avoid Pity; Don't Pry Welcome them, enjoy them, but avoid pity. Listen, but don't pry. Regard them as normal, competent persons. They really are.

And avoid babbling. Yes, even as you parents have been taught to youngsters of years, don't babble the youngsters too much.

Encourage them to resume hobbies, to get jobs, and praise good work, and be patient (just as you always had to be).

Don't try to get them to rest to the point where they become completely inactive; lazy and dependent on others.

Make it easy for them to mix with the family, with old friends and with new ones.

Be warned that the family may have to do more adjusting than the returned veteran in many respects. He will have seen new cultures; new types of morals and picked up new ideas, some of which may shock his family, but are not necessarily signs that he is mentally lost. Some boys will return broader-minded than their families.

The family should resort to medical advice only when the veteran obviously is completely off, remembering that maybe it is the family that is more off base than the returned soldier.

But when you think medical advice is needed, don't wait too long. Mental illness is a habit of mind more than anything else and far easier to cure when caught early.

Origin Unknown

There are yet no sure explanations why so much more psychoneurosis has shown up in this war than ever before in American record.

Coleman R. Griffith, director of the bureau of institutional research, University of Illinois, suggests this:

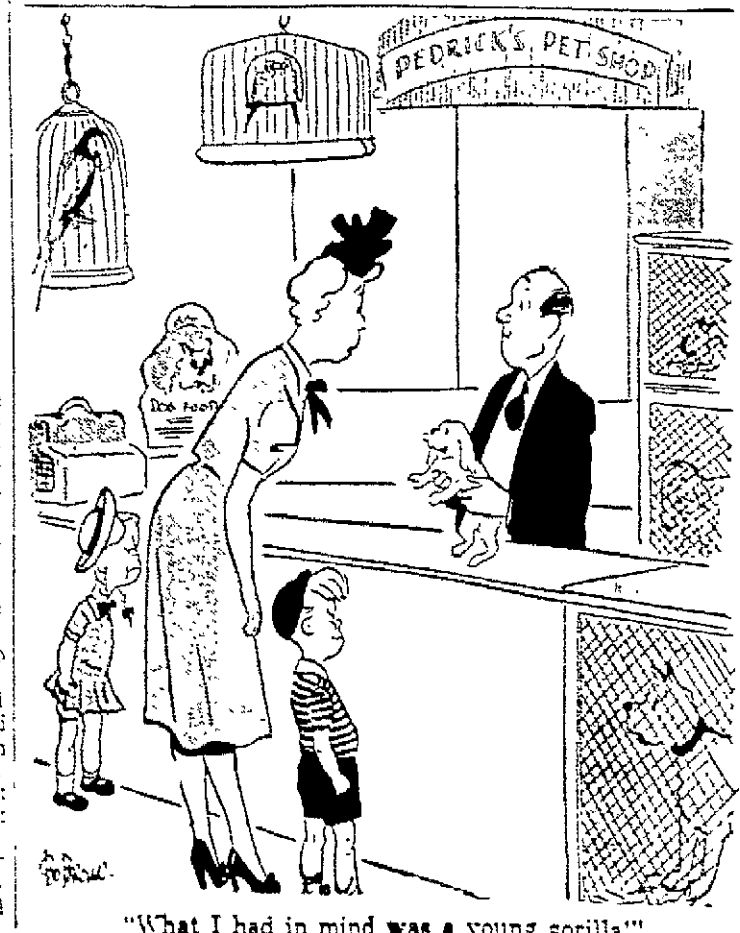

"The record of mental breakdown now has become the great medical problem of all time. One big problem is finding out what was wrong with the American family before the war began. If there is to be an adequate adjustment of returning servicemen and their families, many families must put their houses in order."

Even psychiatrists don't know all the answers. Dr. Henry C. Link, one of the better known American psychologists, pointed out this in the American Mercury.

"In formally branding a man a N.P.," he says, "whether rightly or wrongly, a long step has been taken towards making him one towards transforming a mild tendency into a more serious condition."

Many psychiatrists have been saying the same thing since the war began. There may be a dispute as to who overdid the situation. There is no dispute over the fact that now families need to tread softly and tolerantly and with their families alert to keep from driving their sons into mental institutions.

Daily Bible Thought David was a great sinner and paid for it in blood and tears. No one is so exalted that he can escape the penalty of sin. "But the thing that David had done displeased Jehovah."—II Samuel 11:27.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Sketch of Thomas E. Dewey

TOM DEWEY is a country boy who has good handling the bad boys in the city.

He was born in Oswego, which when he was at the spelling book only seems more like a village of a gasoline. He started out in life as a singer (But not of music). He once played piano in a restaurant, a sign of things to come. But he never been worse than second in any contest.

Mr. Dewey came to New York to get the results from his voice. There have been no complaints. He found New York too full of men and decided to become a lawyer. New York is a law of 14,000,000, but he found that a lawyer could see the fellow who had been there was a future in singing.

Even today he might still be a lawyer, we could do fairly well with in the Glee Club and "Sweet Mystery of Life" if fate had climbed into the shoe last.

George Z. Model, then United States attorney, needed a young assistant and named Dewey. It was in an era when racketeers, gangsters and killers had everybody intimidated. The law enforcement agencies everywhere seemed full of mice. But the Oswego boy came out singing "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?"

And every gangster who heard the record thought he was listening to a quartet of G-men.

At a time when gangsters were making city, county and Federal officials jump through hoops, Dewey staged a show that he, fearlessness made Superman and the Green Hornet seem tame. He soon put the toughest of them in the housework where they did the singing. And their favorite numbers were "Pull for the Shore," "Throw Out the Line" and "Barney, Bar the Door."

The deepest basso voices in the underworld turned to soprano.

Dewey is 42 years old, but looks older when trying to sink his chin put.

Golf is his favorite game, but he doesn't play it well enough to make enemies and lose a lot.

His father was a fourth cousin of Admiral Dewey, but he will make no point of that, as Roosevelt has the better known naval background.

He is extra effective pointing his finger accusingly and asking for a conviction in the first degree. We understand his singing voice has deteriorated a little, but not enough to offend the voters.

On with the campaign! And keep the knives out of the danger zone!

Travel Folders

By Truman Twill

Those were the days—when travel folders told us all we needed to know about far-off places. "Come to beautiful Squeegie Island where the soft winds whisper of maidens dancing in the moonlight. See the lazy sea curling on the beaches, hear the endless choirs of birds chanting a welcome from the deep clusters of the forest...feel young and gay and carefree...bliss..."

What the letters have been getting from American men who have been traveling to far-off places of years under government auspices are going to do to tourist bureau business after this year is something that shouldn't happen to a southern Democrat at a party convention.

"For the love of me never let yourself get caught dead in this dump," write our correspondents. "It's a combination between a county jail and the Sahara desert, with real, live and natives added. When these babies think about modern conveniences, they put a roof over the bed room. The authorities won't even let us touch any of the stuff they eat, because we weren't brought down here to give our lives to food poisoning—and that's one rule they don't have any trouble enforcing. The climate is excellent. No one ever needs to take a bath. They live in running water all their lives, and sometimes they get a chance to dry off when the wind changes. If you are lucky, though, you will not be standing to windward when this happens."

Those travel folders that used to prod tourists into seeing their own country first are taking the bumps too. "You haven't lived, neighbor, until you have sampled our famous hospitality...Spacious quarters...Fine food...Courteous...Trips to nearby points of interest. Be sure to try our famous upside down chicken."

So the neighbors came, trainloads of them. In their wake came wives, sweethearts, fathers, mothers, aunts, uncles, cousins, friends, carpool acquaintances, photographers, promoters, bill collectors, correspondents and even children. The famous hospitality got spread thin and cracked up the middle. Those mansions turned out to be two-room layouts with a lean-to at the end of the grape arbor. There were no nearby points of interest, and no way to get there. The courtesy was mixed with commercial jargon, and the upside down chicken came at $5 a copy, with or without feathers.

We shall not speak of the south sea islands and their inhabitants; the illusion is gone. Not of merrie England and the Emerald Isle. Not the ports of call in the Caribbean, the excitement of the Middle East, the sparkling Mediterranean and the frozen north. We shall not even talk of Japanese cherry blossoms, the jolly German, the romantic Spaniards and the efficiency of the Italian railroads under Mussolini.

We shall think only of the trials ahead of the travel folder boys. They'd better not let their similes and metaphors grow under their feet, because they've a whole new set of illusions to build. Unless they can recover the ground they've lost, the world will be only an overnight hop away from home, so what?

MEN AGAINST DEATH

THE Fifth War Bond Drive is over—but the Invasion is not!

Actually, the war right now is at its most critical stage—which is just why our men need your support as never before, why they need you to help pay for the mass of materials of all kinds that will bring crushing defeat to our enemies that much sooner!

Of course, you have just done your part in the Fifth War Loan Drive—but they have done theirs in many a grim, bloody battle and they aren't resting on what they've done before! They are carrying the fight to the enemy wherever they can reach him, every day—and your dollars are needed every day, too! Surely you won't let up now—when the chips are down!
